A Word from the Pastor

Dear Friends,

Lively discussion continues after the November presidential election. At the heart of the debate lies the “moral values” issue that divides many people. At this point the religious right is claiming they have a monopoly on framing religious values because they delivered the votes that will keep President Bush in office for another four years. Many moderate and progressive Christians are feeling like their religious values are not being heard or even considered in shaping public policy.

Recently I met with seven local clergy who gathered to discuss this issue and we intend to continue our discussions. We are seeking to support one another and our respective churches in better articulating progressive religious values to make that voice more effective. We agreed that “Sojourners,” a progressive evangelical Christian magazine is an excellent resource. Its founder and chief editor Jim Wallis has just written a new book titled: God’s Politics: Why the Right Gets It Wrong and the Left Doesn’t Get It. Wallis’ voice is emerging as a new prophetic vision that challenges both the right and the left.

Wouldn’t it be wonderful to help turn this book into a national bestseller and get progressive religious values into the mainstream of American consciousness! To do so, ask your local bookstore to order copies and get one for yourself. Tell friends and relatives about it. Start up a study group. Anyone interested here at CUCC to have it as a Lenten Study? For more information about Jim Wallis, go to http://www.sojo.net

Blessings and peace

Steve

Deacons

The Deacons Ministry members give our thanks for the leadership and dedication given by Peg Hulslander in her term as chair in 2004.

At our January meeting we discussed goals for 2005. They centered on involving members of the congregation in the spiritual life of the church and reaching out into the community to involve new people. Ideas suggested included providing opportunities for members to share their faith journeys either in worship or other settings; working with Campus Ministers at NCSU to interest students in attending church services; and making a greater effort to follow up with visitors and newcomers by hosting newcomer events, such as newcomer breakfasts. We also discussed innovative worship alternatives. One of the ideas is to invite people to bring their dogs to the Taize Service. (This would be on a trial basis. Dates and other specifics to be announced. If you have questions or comments, contact Peg Hulslander.) The remainder of our meeting was involved with a discussion of various Lenten activities (highlighted below) and hearing committee reports.

Deacons’ Profile Series

June Bolton continues the series of deacon profiles. NOTE: subjects of interviews are provided a draft to review, with an opportunity to edit the text.

I.T. Littleton

The gentlemanly deacon we know as “I. T.” was born on January 28, 1921, as Isaac Thomas Littleton III. Family tradition decreed the use of only the initials. He has another name he doesn’t normally use: “Dr. Littleton”. While he worked diligently to acquire that one, as he feels the title is most appropriate for medical doctors. But modest as he may be, I. T. has quite a story!

This church leader grew up in Hartsville, TN, where I. T. recalls studying "elocution" and tap dancing while beginning an amateur acting career. He was in three or four plays a year during high school, and he wasn’t merely “playing himself”. He won “Best Actor” in a statewide high school drama competition, playing against type as the villain. That surely demonstrated his range and talent!

To attend college, I. T. “came over the mountains to Chapel Hill” because of the Carolina Playmakers. But he ended up majoring in Sociology and working in the university library 35 hours a week. After graduation, he served three years in the Navy during World War II. Somehow, when he was stationed in California in 1945, I. T. also found time to enter a ballroom dance contest in which he recalls winning a bottle of champagne. Although he ran into his dance partner from the contest more than 50 years later at a United Nations Association meeting, he had long since found the love of his life, Dorothy Young, the woman we know as Dot.

In I.T.’s opinion, it may well have been “love at first sight” when they met. I. T. was earning a master’s degree in Psychology at the University of Tennessee. The romance progressed quickly, and the Littletons were married on August 12, 1949. Then, remembering the satisfactions of that college job, I. T. decided he wanted to become a librarian.

Shortly after I. T. obtained a master’s in library science from the University of Illinois, his former employer, the library of UNC-Chapel Hill, invited him to return to head up the Circulation Department. A clipping from the Greensboro Daily News, under his byline and dated December 13, 1953, documents I.T.’s work to organize an exhibition of banned books and to put contemporary instances of censorship into perspective with examples dating back to ancient times.

During their eight years in Chapel Hill, the Littletons also welcomed their three children, Sally, Thomas and Elizabeth. Then Harlan Brown, the director of the NCSU library and a CUCC member, recruited I.T. for the position of assistant director of technical services. In 1959, I. T. accepted that position and the family moved Cary.

I.T. isn’t sure whether it was Harlan Brown or a co-worker, our own Cy King, who first introduced him to CUCC, but in 1963 the Littletons joined and really liked “the liberal emphasis” and the “atmosphere of the church.” (Now, I. T. says his mentor’s widow, Helen Brown, is CUCC’s oldest member, while I. T. is probably our oldest active member.)

After a year back in Illinois for I. T.’s doctorate in library science, the Littletons finally settled in Raleigh in 1964, buying property out in the country, near a lake and a pasture with cows. They recall that Highway 70 was then a two-lane road. More than 40 years later, they are in the same location, which now borders Crabtree Valley Mall.

Most of I.T.’s 28 years of service at NCSU was after his selection as the director of the library in 1964. He oversaw two major building projects, a large and growing staff (numbering 140, for instance, in 1981), the beginning of the online catalog, and the acquisition of the library’s millionth volume before retiring in 1987 when he received many honors and congratulations.

That year, the Littletons used retirement gifts to travel to England with the Dickens Disciples. During his highly successful career, I. T. also continued to act from time to time. He once portrayed Hugh in “Look Homeward Angel” with Helen Crisp, another CUCC member, as his wife. His last role, in 1981, was as a senator in a play called “Indians” at Theater in the Park.

In four decades of service to CUCC, I. T. says he’s held just about every position at one time or another, including clerk, moderator and head of the Finance Committee. He first served as a deacon while chairing the Caring Committee during the 1980s.

Now in the third year of his current term as a deacon, I. T. is the board’s highly valued scribe. In addition, according to Steve, I. T. “is an outstanding lay reader, and he loves doing it.” Steve also especially appreciates the way I. T. “brings his keen intellect and library skills to the congregation in ways that help us be informed on issues of justice and peace” and “keeps us connected with the United Nations Association in the Raleigh area.”

I.T. enjoys attending the meetings of the retired people’s fellowship every month and is highly enthusiastic about the Saturday men’s group and the book they are currently discussing, Free Thinkers, by Susan Jacoby. His lifelong love of literature and progressive ideals were also reflected when the Littletons visited Monroeville, AL, last year, the setting of his all-time favorite book, Harper Lee’s To Kill a Mockingbird.

With all that I. T. has done for our church with little if any thought of return, there recently came a time that CUCC was able to give something back. I. T. and Dot have long been involved in the lives of their four grandchildren, especially during the illness and loss of their daughter-in-law. He says CUCC support during that time was a tremendous comfort. Let’s add to that now by extending our warm congratulations to this extraordinary individual and deacon on the occasion of his 84th birthday!
Social Justice

The Social Justice Ministry joins all church members and friends of Carolyn King in wishing her a speedy and complete recovery from her recent surgery. Carolyn and Cy embody the social justice conscience of CUCC, and their service to the entire human community through the Social Action Committee (now Social Justice Ministry - SJM) is irreplaceable. So, get well and get back to us soon, dear friend.

CUCC and the Social Justice Ministry recently lost an effective and loyal member and ardent activist in the person of Nancy Keppel. As a gesture of affection and symbol of respect for Nancy’s commitment to social justice, the SJM will contribute $200 per year for five years to one of Nancy’s favorite causes, the Resource Center for Women in the South, Inc.

Pastor Steve Halsted reported at the SJM’s January meeting that the North Carolina Council of Churches is sponsoring a statewide event on the issue of human-caused climate change. The event will be held on Earth Day, April 22, 2005. A prior organizational meeting is going to be held at Saint Francis of Assisi Church where 100 people--clergy, lay people, scientists, and environmental activists--will establish the focus and direction of the Earth Day meeting.

The Social Justice Ministry is currently evaluating those public policy issues and organizations that it plans to work with, endorse, and help subsidize during 2005.

In concert with appropriate personnel and ministries in the church, the Social Justice Ministry is preparing a proposal to plant 200 tulip bulbs on the church property in honor of the 2005 Million Mom March on Washington.

Religious Education

The next Children’s Church School rotation (Jan. 23 to Feb. 6) will be on the Last Supper. This is the rotation during which the children learn about communion. On Feb. 6 the children will return to worship to sit with their parent during communion. At CUCC, parents decide whether their children should receive a blessing or take part in communion. Steve's information session is an opportunity to ask him questions and also to talk to other parents.

Any parent unable to attend the January 23 session about communion is welcome to call the church office (787-6422) to set up a private appointment with Steve.

SPCA and Dinner with Steve and Marcy

On February 26, the 6th and 7th grade youth will meet at CUCC at 3:30 for a field trip to the SPCA followed by dinner at Steve and Marcy’s home. Parents can pick up at the Halsted's at 8:00. Please RSVP Steve or Marcy so they know how much dinner to cook.

HELP! On Palm Sunday our Sunday School classes will be studying prayer. We are looking for someone who knows sign language and would be able to come to our joint class and sign the Lord’s Prayer for the children. If you are interested, please see Anne Bailey.

Soda bottles needed. Our Sunday School classes will be participating in an activity that requires large plastic soda bottles with lids (3 liter size). If you can donate any of these to us, it would be greatly appreciated. Please leave them on the table in our large Sunday School room. Thank you!

Our People

Jo Lemons’ new companion has one waggly tail, two big brown eyes, and three legs (hence the name Trinity). Jo notes it’s a good thing her Trinity doesn’t have four legs, or she could jump the fence!

We are happy to hear at press time that Carolyn King has completed post-operative care and post-surgery rehab at UNC and is now at home. Cy and Carolyn – consider yourself hugged by us all!

The Epiphany Party drew >75 folk to share food, song, the Puerto Rican and Louisiana traditions, and the joy of four new babies! Lindsey Kepler, a 2004 honoree, made her first appearance as well. Carol Kepler, the Littletons, Geraldine Bryan, Vandy Bradow all beamed at their grandchildren!

Mary Pickering, the great niece of the late Susie Allen and Fannie Bell Jones, two sisters who were long-time CUCC members, attended worship services on January 16th. Susie Allen served as the church clerk for many years and was a prominent member of the choir. To recognize the many contributions that Ms. Allen to the church, the congregation voted to name the choir the Susie Allen Choir. Mary Pickering who lives at 2103 Breeze Road in Raleigh is a singer herself and we hope that she may visit again.

Robert Parrish shares his prose and poetry:

Reconciliation at Christmas
It was not until my late thirties that I met my real father. I got acquainted with him at a family reunion in Arden, N. C., which is near Asheville. No, this was not an "Oprah" experience; there were no fireworks going off in the sky or beautiful orchestra music playing in the background. Bobby, the name that most people called my father, did not fully acknowledge that I was his son. But, there was no doubt about it; I was his son. There were too many relatives that disclosed to me that Bobby was my dad. What’s more, my late mother finally came around to admitting to me that this was so.

Despite the lack of happy emotions, I did feel a sense of wholeness. Here was a man that had similar characteristics to mine. We seemed to look, talk, and walk alike.

Just a few years ago, Bobby developed brain cancer and was dying. It so happens that I met my half sister at the same family reunion where I met my father. As she kept in contact with me, she kept me informed about his medical condition. Right before Christmas of 2001 I had the opportunity to visit my sister and Bobby in Arden. It was there that I had prayer with him. During the prayer an atmosphere of peace and forgiveness permeated his home. Yes, emotional and spiritual healing did take place. A few weeks later sister Linda called to tell me that Bobby had died.

Even though Bobby is with God, my sister and I have continued to build upon our relationship. During this past holiday season I journeyed to Asheville to visit her. It was great to see her and to interact with my niece and nephew. I also got the opportunity to meet her significant other. What’s more, I got to meet one of my brothers for the first time.

Sure, there were times that I wondered if I knew what I was doing. However, the feeling that sticks with me is that "it was just like family."

Christmas is about forgiveness and the building of relationships. At least, this is how I grew this past holiday season.

--Robert Parrish

The Day after Christmas

The day after Christmas, how will you live?
The day after Christmas, what joy will you give?
Will you live a life of peace on earth
Giving hope to all for more Jesus’ birth?
After all that Christmas glow
Will its light your spirit show?

The day after Christmas, after lovely times
The day after Christmas, will you still be kind?
After having all of your plenty
Will you share with those without any?
After all that Christmas glow
Will its love your spirit show?
The day after Christmas.
The day after Christmas.

Thursdays         Jo Lemons’ Study Group
5:30      book and place TBA
For many years a small group of CUCC members have gathered to study and to pray as a group at the Lenten season. Usually the group has used a Maxie Dunham workbook as their source of inspiration for 6 weekly meetings, and usually the vibrant spirit of now 70 year old (hard to believe!) Jo Lemons has been an integral part of the group. It is unclear at the writing of this how much involvement Jo may be able to have with us this year, but there is at least enough desire and interest that we’re listing this Lenten study group again this year as a spiritual growth experience. Adrienne Talbot is exploring what book we might use as the basis for our inspiration. The first meeting will be held at 5:30 P.M. on Thursday, February 17, and continuing for six consecutive Thursdays at either the church or a home within a few mile radius of the church, to be announced later. Do consider joining in the mystery of exploring spiritual growth during this six-week period in this group! If interested in venturing into possibilities in sharing through study and prayer, call Adrienne Talbot at 787-8082 or Marty Lamb at 834-4280 to join the group and be included in the book order.

Fridays - Discussion, Being Peace
7-8 p.m. in the Bradow room
To what extent are we as Western Christians too materialistic? Is reincarnation truly real? What can we learn about meditation? In his book, Being Peace, Tich Naht Hanh, a Buddhist monk, challenges us to think about these and other questions. In this publication, which is inexpensive and available in bookstores, he helps to see how we are all interconnected with each other and the universe. Mr. Hanh also makes the demand that we as Western Christian do a much better job in taking care of the environment. Robert Parrish will be leading this discussion group.

Saturdays         Bedtime Stories
6:30-7:15 p.m. in Vaughan Fellowship Hall
What could be better on a cold winter night than to cuddle up with a good story?

BEDTIME STORIES

Cuddle up with friends and family as you listen to Geraldine Bryan, master storyteller, tell the stories of Jesus’ life. We’ll sip hot cocoa, sing a hymn or two and have a few minutes for chatting.

Children can go home to bed or take home a church friend for a sleepover. Adults still have time for a night out. You might want to make plans to go out together after the story. Geraldine’s stories enthral listeners of all ages - all-CUCCers are invited. You are welcome to bring friends. Each week’s story stands alone.

Saturdays, 6:30 - 7:15 p.m.
in the Vaughan Fellowship Hall
February 19, 26, March 5, 12
sign a cocoa mug on the youth bulletin board to help our preparations

What to bring: Nothing is required, but it might be fun to dress in PJ’s and bring a favorite pillow, blanket or sleep friend.
