Guidelines for Philosophy Writing Courses:

The completed paper must be a substantial piece of philosophical analysis in which the student (i) articulates a clear thesis or main interpretive point and then (ii) offers reasons to support that thesis or interpretive point. The final draft for the writing paper should be between 2,000-4,000 words, with the minimum within this range determined by the instructor. A minimum of two drafts (one may be partial, the other complete) should be submitted for comments prior to the submission of the final draft. Two clean hard copies of the final draft must be submitted by the student to staff in the department office (Withers 340) at the conclusion of the course before a final grade (other than IN or F) will be submitted to Registration and Records.

I have read the above information and understand the course description, prerequisite/corequisite needs, and guidelines related to the writing course I wish to enroll in for the semester indicated above.
